The Latest News

CCHR Welcomes New Class

The Center for Civil and Human Rights welcomes its new class of international human rights lawyers for the 2017-18 academic year.

This LL.M. class includes 24 lawyers who have come from 17 countries to deepen their theoretical foundation and broaden their advocacy skill set. Read more here.

Welcome New Employees

Emily Saavedra is the new administrative assistant for the CCHR and the general LL.M program. She has worked at Notre Dame for many years, most recently at Mendoza College of Business. We are happy to welcome Emily to the Law School. Stop by the CCHR suite to say hello.

Joe Nugent has joined the library teaching and research team as a visiting research librarian. Joe is a 2017 NDLS graduate and is eager to bring his experience with a wide array of print and electronic resources to his new position. If you don't already know Joe, stop by 2307 Biolchini to meet him. If you do already know him, stop by to welcome him back to NDLS.

Earlier this summer, Michael Addo started his new role as director of the London Global Gateway Law Program. Michael will be at NDLS in mid-September, and we hope that many of you will have a chance to meet him in person. Read more about him here.

Around the Watercooler

The Admissions and Communications teams took an on-campus field trip last week to see the new venue spaces at the Campus Crossroads. It was amazing! Everyone was very impressed with the different options for events and the wonderful stadium enhancements.

We would love to share news about employees and departments in this section. Are your kids selling Girl Scout cookies? Did you win an award outside of work? Did you participate in a cool volunteer project recently? Did someone in your department do something special you think we should know about?

Fill out the submission form here.

Have a great week!
